

Installing EndNote from AppsAnywhere

Install AppsAnywhere:

Before you can install EndNote and other programs you have to install AppsAnywhere on your computer. Windows users will also get the app "Cloudpaging player". This app handles Windows programs and keeps track of the downloaded programs. Here you can also remove such programs with a keystroke. Follow the instructions on the following page to get AppsAnywhere installed:

NB! If you do not use EndNote for awhile, you may get a message saying the license is expired. If this happens, you can download again using the AppsAnywhere Launcher (see below).

Install EndNote:

Go to <https://apps.ntnu.no/>

Log in to AppsAnywhere with your NTNU-user (1).

Click "Open AppsAnywhere Launcher" to activate the program (2). If you do not want to do this each time, tick "Always allow apps.ntnu.no to open links of this type in the associated app".

Good afternoon

What would you like to launch?

Type "EndNote" in the search field (2). Click "Start" (3) to start local installation. You should close all Office programs before doing this.

To get an overview of all available programs, click "View all apps".

If you are using Windows, the application will be automatically available locally in Windows, as long as you have the right to use it from NTNU. You can find the app locally in Windows by using the Windows start button or search function (magnifying glass) and type in the name and can also create a shortcut to it once found there.

Note that EndNote will not start unless AppsAnywhere/Cloudpaging is running on your computer. They will normally start automatically when you start the computer.

We have observed sometimes a delay (5-10 minutes) the first time you try to use EndNote in a manuscript. Later, things should work in a normal speed.
