International Conference

This conference is organized within the framework of the five-year research project “Women, Opera and the Public Stage in Eighteenth-Century Venice” (WoVen), funded by the Norwegian Research Council and based at the Music Institute, NTNU. The conference brings together leading specialists in the fields of musicology, history and opera, theatre and literary studies, as well as junior scholars in these fields, to explore the role of women in European operatic culture in one of the most important centres of the Enlightenment: Venice—a hub for critical debate, an important proto-feminist centre and a prominent operatic centre of international significance.

The papers presented explore public and operatic life in the Serenissima, the network of women (Venetian and non) who, as singers, managers, patrons and audience members, participated in the operatic life of the city, and how opera-going contributed to women’s increased visibility in contemporary culture and society. The conference contextualizes these activities within historical knowledge of women’s rights and wider contemporary critical discourses about women’s education and place in society.

The conference features sessions dedicated to female singers, their careers, individual vocal qualities, and practice of ornamentation, as well as acting techniques, costumes, dramaturgy, dramatic roles, and different modes of representation of the feminine. It explores the practice of cross-gender casting and the interaction among stage role and public persona, questions of agency, and the mechanisms of celebrity’s creation in the eighteenth century. Women in authorial and leadership roles provide a lens through which to explore how such activities may have functioned as platforms for claiming a female authorial voice in the male-dominated space of theatre direction and libretto writing.

A round table at the end of the conference discusses the challenges and opportunities of staging eighteenth-century opera today. The impact on the audience of the ‘seen’ and ‘heard’ body on the stage invites discussion around the thorny issue of authenticity, ‘period’ vs ‘historically informed’ performance practices, and the creative opportunities in costume design. It includes an interview with opera director and choreographer Deda Cristina Colonna and fashion designer Silvano Arnoldo.

While the conference’s focus is on operatic women in eighteenth-century Venice, discussions and reflections are encouraged to go further to assess the female role in the transnational literary and gender history of early modern Europe. By reconstructing careers, activities, and acting practices of female singers and their impact on opera production, and by shedding new light on how Italian opera was practiced and how it accompanied the life of women of the past, the papers presented here aim to enhance our understanding of Italian opera’s impact on the construction of gender roles and models over the long “century of women.”

Denne konferansen arrangeres innenfor rammen av det femårige forskningsprosjektet «Kvinner, opera og den offentlige scene i 1700-tallets Venezia» (WoVen), finansiert av Norges Forskningsråd ved musikkinstituttet, NTNU. Konferansen samler ledende spesialister innen musikkvitenskap, historie og opera, teater og litteraturvitenskap, samt juniorforskere innen disse feltene, for å utforske kvinners rolle i europeisk operakultur i et av de viktigste sentrene i opplysningsperioden: Venezia – et knutepunkt for kritisk debatt, et viktig proto-feministisk senter og et fremtredende operasenter av internasjonal betydning.

Innleggene som presenteres utforsker det offentlige og operalivet i Serenissima, nettverket av kvinner (venetianske og ikke-venetianske) som, som sangere, managere, mesener og publikummere, deltok i operalivet i byen, og hvordan operadrift bidro til kvinners økte synlighet i samtidskultur og samfunn. Konferansen kontekstualiserer disse aktivitetene innenfor historisk kunnskap om kvinners rettigheter og bredere samtidskritiske diskurser om kvinners utdanning og plass i samfunnet.

Konferansen inneholder sesjoner dedikert til kvinnelige sangere, deres karrierer, individuelle vokale kvaliteter og praktisering av ornamentikk, samt skuespillerteknikker, kostymer, dramaturgi, dramatiske roller og forskjellige representasjonsmåter av det feminine. Den utforsker praksisen med rollesetning på tvers av kjønn og samspillet mellom scenerolle og offentlig persona, spørsmål om agency og mekanismene for fremveksten av celebritet i det attende århundre. Kvinner i forfatter- og lederroller gir en linse for å utforske hvordan slike aktiviteter kan ha fungert som plattformer for å kreve en kvinnelig forfatterstemme i det mannsdominerte rommet for teaterregi og librettoskriving.

En rundeboardsdebatt på slutten av konferansen diskuterer utfordringene og mulighetene ved å sette opp 1700-tallsopera i dag. Virkningen på publikum av den "sette" og "hørte" kroppen på scenen inviterer til diskusjon rundt det vanskelige spørsmålet om autentisitet, "periode" kontra "historisk informert" fremføringspraksis, og de kreative mulighetene i kostymedesign. Det inkluderer et intervju med operaregissør og koreograf Deda Cristina Colonna og motedesigner Silvano Arnoldo.

Da konferansens fokus er på operakvinner i Venezia på 1700-tallet, oppfordres diskusjoner og refleksjoner til å gå videre for å vurdere kvinnernas rollen i den transnasjonale litteratur- og kjønnshistorien til det tidligmoderne Europa. Ved å rekonstruere karrierer, aktiviteter og skuespillerpraksiser til kvinnelige sangere og deres innvirkning på operaproduksjoner, og ved å kaste nytt lys over hvordan italiensk opera ble praktisert og hvordan den fulgte livet til kvinner fra fortiden, har innleggene som presenteres her som mål å forbedre vår forståelse av italiensk operas innvirkning på konstruksjonen av kjønnsroller og modeller gjennom det lange «kvinnenes århundre».
