- Generation and migration

Question 2: Answer either a) or b)

a) Remittances. What are remittances and how are remittances relevant to discuss at national, community and individual levels. Introduce the different types of remittances that the literature for the course discusses. Explain the relationship between general expectations to migrants’ remittances and what migrants actually do. Please, do refer to theoretical approaches where relevant and provide empirical examples.

b) Does migration lead to development? Explain the relationship between migration and development. Present different theoretical standpoints on whether migration may lead to development. What are important policies (for national and international migration alike) that may help to generate development from migration processes?
