Background
Due to recent failures of high head francis turbines, there is a need to improve the understanding of the physics related dynamic stresses in high head francis turbines.

Goals
Through experiments and theoretical investigations increase the general understanding of dampened oscillations in flowing water.

Evaluate and possibly improve the current methods for calculating stresses in francis turbines.

Industrial PhD project with Rainpower, supported by The Research Council of Norway.